THE ANGLO-CHINESE CALENDAR MANUÁL.

A Handbook of reference for the determination of Chinese Dates, during the period from 1860 to 1869; with comparative Tables of Annual and Mensual Designations, &c., &c. Compiled by WILLIAM FREDE-BICK MAYERS, H.M.C.S.

Author's Preface. Most persons whose avocations or studies are connected even remotely with Chinese subjects are wont to confess the need of convenient manual of reference for the purpose of determining dates according to either the European or the Chinese method of computation; and a system of comparison for the names attributed to years. months, and other periods is also frequent ly a desideratum with translators and readers of Chinese literature. The compiler of the following tables has thought accordingly, that their publication in a convenient form may prove useful, although much yet remains to be done for the elaboration of comparative calendars, etc. that should leave nothing to be desired. With the exception of the Cyclical Table of Years, and the Table of Solar Terms, both of which were originally compiled by Dr. Morrison, and afterwards republished with improvements in Williams' Commercial Guide, from which (with some alteration) they are now copied, the whole of the mat-

SHIPPING REPORTS. Constance, Brit. bq., left Freemantle on the 29th March, with light variable winds which continued until crossing the equator on the 2nd May. Had no trades on either side. Up the China sea had moderate S. wind until the 24th May; then experienced a strong gale from the N. N. W. and heavy sea; afterwards, until reaching Shanghai on the 30th, light variable winds and fine weather. Spoke the Ocean Bride, on the 24th May, from Columbo for Ningpo, 150 days out.

Glenavon, Br. sh., left Newcastle N. S. W., on the 6th April with moderate E to E. S. E. wind and fine weather; then light N. E. wind ; fell in with the S. E. Trades on the 20th and carried them as far as i S; crossed the equator on the 1st May in long 165 E., the wind N. E. to N. W squally and baffling; had very indifferent N. E. Trades, the wind up the China sea prevailing from the E. to S. E. until making the Lewchew Islands; then thick squally weather, afterwards light variable winds and fine weather; arrived at Shanghai on 30th

The British ship Guinevere, Capt. Spowart left Saigon April 15th for Yokohama; passed Cape St. James April 16th and experienced fine weather with light Easterly winds up to the night of April 30th when it came on to blow hard from the North-East, and on the morning of May 1st it increased to a tremendous gale accompanied by a very heavy cross sea. At about 1.15 A. M., May 1st, a tremendous sea broke on board between the main and mizen rigging, washing away all the hencoops, and harness casks, and carrying overboard with it two seamen, one named Walter Waters, boatswain's mate, a native of Lowestoft, England, and the other W. Green, A.B., a native of Hull. The ship was immediately put about, but nothing could be seen of the unfortunate men, and in any case it would have been impossible to lower a boat, owing to the tremendous sea which was run-On the 10th of May, Madame Pelicot a passenger died of general debility. The Guinevere reports light winds from the Bashee Island to this Port which she reached on the 20th inst.

THE CHINA MAIL. HONGKONG, TUESDAY, JUNE 8, 1869.

GREAT BRITAIN AND AMERICA

THE telegrams from the United States which we copied in our last evening's issue have naturally attracted a certain amount of attention, as indeed the matters they relate to appear to have done in all quarters of the world where the English language is spoken. Stripped of the exagjun19 gerated style which is common to the debates of our transatlantic cousins, the speeches of which these telegrams are excerpts represent a feeling towards England which far exceeds annoyance or even anger at what the speakers are pleased to consider our unfriendly and unfair conduct during the war. It is the first time that the cession of territory, as a compensation for injuries, real or supposed, inflicted by us on others has beenseriously urged by any whose position entitled them to consideration. The position of the United States at this moment is unique in their history. They have passed through a crisis more trying than any which has ever yet beset a nation, and beside which many internecine wars fade by comparison. They have been successful at a cost greater than any yet incurred in the world's history for similar purposes, and are required to carry out at the moment that process of amalgamation and equality between victors and vanquished, to do which in other countries and between other races decades, if not centuries, have been requisite. Of course the unity of language may be held to alter the conditions, but it also tends to nourish and keep alive ill-will. There is again the negro, despised by the one and hated by the other section, who is being elevated to satisfy the moral feelings of a people who cannot overcome their social repugnance to the object of their care. To say nothing of the differences of party opinion-and in the present case all parties are unanimous in their anathemas against England—the Presidency of the nation at such a time is a sufficiently

His Honor gave judgment in this case. He said that he was of opinion that the 30 cents per head was intended as the commission for those coolies who were shipped for Surinam, and on that point he would give judgment merely for the $55.60 lodged in Court. From the evidence and correspondence, however, it was sufficiently eviplunging the overburdened States into a dent that the plaintiff had rendered great assistance in the procuration of the coolies: and for this he would give judgment in the sum of $250, with costs of attorney.

He was anxious to establish himself upon a proper basis among the people, and would allow nothing done in his name underhandedly, refusing several opportunities to secure the property he so much needed because he would neither rent nor buy in another's name, nor without its being full understood by all concerned that it was for mission purposes. FURTHER INSULTS TO FOREIGNERS—DIS-TURBANCES EXPECTED.

From the Javan Gazette of May 2d, we learn that the complexion of political affairs becomes so gloomy that it thinks it becomes its duty to speak more plainly of what considers the true position than it has lately done. At this moment, there is unpleasantness brewing than most have any idea of; and some of our repre sentatives, wide-awake themselves to the true position, would be content to let their co-nationals remain in ignorance of this fact. But it is mistaken policy.

Everyone knows that during the pas fortnight, diplomatic relations with government have been disturbed. usults that were offered to the Englishmer the Tokaido shewed that the cutting down spirit is all there; and any opposition to the Samourai who insisted on the marmed foreigners getting down from their vehicle, would have most probably nded fatally. As it is, the Mikado has sent his regrets to Sir Harry Parkes; but the British Minister demands the names of the culprits, and the government declares that they are unknown. Now here is strange thing. The names are quite wellknown to the people, and yet are unknown to the government; although all officers so passing along the Tokaido are questioned. their names taken, and the time of passing special guard-houses, noted. Sir Harry refused to accept the apology unless accompanied by the names. We shall see what the result will be.

But apart from this, indications are increasingly prevalent everywhere, since the advent of the Mikado and the daimios with their retainers in Yedo, that an outbreak is imminent. It is difficult accurately to determine whether it will take place in the city itself : but universal opinion holds presence of foreigners.

in the city the insults to foreigners are also more numerous than for a long time past. A gentleman was lately riding along, attended by a Japanese guard. A samourar got in his way; and one of the guard rode up to remonstrate, when the fellow took the foot of the guard and tossed him out of his saddle over his nony; and the foreigner had to show his revolver to save the guard Why no complaint was made to the officials we are at a less to understand. The reason given by the gentleman to whom it happened, is, that he frequently visits Yedo on business, and that it would cause him

Indeed the party opposed to foreigners s far from being even quiescent : far less dead. And it is as sure as anything can be in Japan, that it only awaits a favourable moment to make itself felt; and to bring on a foreign war.

It is not true that an actual rupture h taken place between the English French Ministers on the one side and the Japanese government, on the other; but as the latter hesitate to give any satisfac tion, in the shape of apology or anything else, for the late interferences with for eigners, all the foreign representatives have agreed to suspend further diplomati relations with the government until ful and ample reparation shall have been made

MISSIONS AND MISSIONARIES. The recent little affair in China, which was settled in one way by what may called the gunboat of Christianity, and another by the good sense and justice o Lord Clarendon, suggests some reflections on missions and missionaries generally and their mode of work. What kind of success do they really achieve? why do they fai with one race and not with another ? which is in fact their best hunting-ground for converts? and what is the secret of victory loss in these matters? The success which Roman Catholic missionaries boast admitting it to be true, has been ascribed to several causes. They are single men acting under very strict discipline, so that naturally their cost of living is small, and a little money goes a long way. Moreover. they are too well trained to subordination to venture on such curious and irrational reaks as are occasionally performed by Protestant missionaries. They are ac cused of being more unxious to baptize the foreheads than to convince the understandings of their converts, and of showing undue indulgence to the remnants heathen faith and ceremonies which linger in the minds and crop out in the customs of many nominal proselytes. doubt English Protestant missions and missionaries are expensive to the societies which support them owing to their partiality for the company of their wives and their irrepressible tendency to large families; they are also occasionally expensive to the country, as we know to our cost and they are sometimes viewed with disrust by natives, as being supposed, by the operation of an unexplained but inflexib law, to be the harbinger of the traders and soldiers whose coming the unfortunate pagans generally find reason sooner or later to lament. Comparatively few of them are very learned men, if we may judge by the specimens frequently exhibited at Exeter Hall, nor do they receive that rigid. scientific training which the Church of Rome commonly insists on. It is perhaps for this reason that of all the dear heathen who are exposed to our zeal for conversion, our woolly-headed brother, the negro, it is who capitulates the most readily. The Maoris have indeed adopted Christianity, but in practice they seem to be more inspired by the spirit the Old Testament than of the New; and we have converted the Zulus wholesale, but then, en revauche, they have shaken the faith of one of our own bishops. nese appreciate our efforts inadequately and it is easier to make of the young Brahman a polished and learned sceptic than a Christian. The Turks and infidels for whom we pray so often do not respond, and the Mahometans in general not only dispise but hate our religion. But others, the Jew has in him less of the material that goes to make a convert than, as we believe, any human being gentleman once boasted that, though he had had many and curious dealings with the children of Israel, only one had ever got the better of him, "but then." added. "he was a converted Jew." Notwithstanding the undoubted proneness of the ancient Jew to idolatry, most anthropologists maintain that the Semitic is essentially and naturally a monotheistic race, and therefore. must ever be instinctively disinclined receive the doctrine of the Trinity. without searching so profoundly into the subject there are, we think, many reason lying quite on the surface to explain why the Jew is the most difficult of proselytes, He comes of a stubborn and also of a persecuted race. In a church which was well filled "several Jews were observed," A Rabbi, also, fond of controversy, was well read in infidel books, "from which he had extracted much poison and all kinds of arguments, which he uses against Christianity." Another "appeared to us to be thirsting after truth." A shopkeeper was "so baffled and perplexed, but not beaten that he struck his head and beard in great agitation, and declared he would never give up the Talmud, whether our arguments were right or wrong." Of one it is remarked, "I cannot just say that he belonged to that highly interesting class, the secret believers." As we searched in vain for further mention of the class which comprises these objects of interest, we fear that even "secret believers" are something more than rare. The wife of a Jew who had attentively listened to conversations on Christianity "had evidently grown in knowledge, I wish I could add also in grace, but that was not the case.' observes the aggrieved missionary. Ac counts of arguments and discussions mostly end thus: "I met this objection by Scripture and then we separated." "We were interrupted, and the discussion One Jew remarked that he was "tired of the tracts, and advised us to sell and circulate old Hebrew books as being more useful and interesting." Another "begged us to leave him, as he never would believe in what we said." One, who to speak plainly was an old clothes man, maintained firmly that i the Messiah had come as the missionaries represented he should not be obliged to stand in the fair selling hats. With regard to the depôt of the society at the last Paris Exhibition, great stress is laid on the fact that none of the tracts given to the Jews were found in the park torn or thrown away. This might be a hopeful sign if it were said of a British workman, but then. as a rule, Jews do not waste even paper. At Mulhouse an old Jew complained not only of the sinfulness of mankind, but of ais own sins; he had, however, "an inveterate antipathy to Jesus." Elsewhere we read, "The building was full, Jewish faces seen." Two amiable young Jewesses received tracts; some boy Jews (apparently also amiable) did the same thing; finally, two ladies of title shook hands with the missionaries, and Prince Oscar of Sweden, with his chamberlain spent half an hour at the society's depôt in Paris .- Pall Mall

EDUCATIONAL FUNDS IN

A parliamentary return gives the amount expended, during the ten years between 1859 and 1868, both inclusive, out of the moneys voted by Parliament for national education in England and Wales. It then exhibits in detail under the heads "subscriptions," "school pence," and "other sources" the sums of money raised locally to meet the grants from the Central Education Department in Downing-street. During the ten years to which we have referred the department voted £6,070,135. To meet this amount no less a sum than £8,991,405 was raised locally, £4,554,333 being subscriptions. £3,241,327 being "school pence" and £1,195,754 the contributions from £3,241,327 being "school pence," and £1,195,745 the contributions from "other sources." But in almost every journal in which these figures have been quoted the above-named sum £8,991,505 has been represented as the whole and sole amount locally raised throughout England and Wales for the purpose of national education in ten years. It is difficult to understand how people could fall into such an obvious error, inasmuch as before this very return appeared another parliamentary paper moved for by the Duke of Marlborough and relating to Church of England schools for the noor alone had been issued. This paper shows that in England and Wales, while 4,690 Church of England schools are annually aided by the State, there are as many as 6,571 national or parish schools not so aided, but supported by contributions, school pence, and occasionally by endowments, but all, of course, raised ocally, and not met by one farthing of State money. Such are the relative proportions of State aided and unaided schools for the Church of England alone. But we have to take into account all the money raised locally and independently of the State grants by Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, the Congregational body, the Baptists, and various other religious denominations, to say nothing of the moneys raised from British and "ragged" schools and schools peculiarly philanthropic in character, such as the schools at Pinner belonging to the Commercial Travellers. Last night about nine o'clock, he was decoyed outside the town, by the rook of Mr Ab bot of the Customs, and another man, storekeeper in the Customs, on pretence of going to look after a thief. He was walking along with one of these men in front, the other behind. The man in fron said 'Listen,' and at that moment the constable fell to the ground. He managed to fire two shots with his revolver, but it is not known what effect they had. The two men escaped and have not since been seen. FURTHER INSULTS TO FOREIGNERS-DIS TURBANCES EXPECTED.

From the Japan Gazette of May 2d. we learn that the complexion of political affaire becomes so gloomy that it thinks it become its duty to speak more plainly of what i considers the true position than it has lately done. At this moment, there is more unpleasantness brewing than most people have any idea of; and some of our representatives, wide-awake themselves to the true position, would be content to let their co-nationals remain in ignorance of this fact. But it is mistaken policy. Everyone knows that during the past fortnight, diplomatic relations with government have been disturbed. insults that were offered to the Englishmen on the Tokaido shewed that the cutting down spirit is all there; and any opposition to the Samourai who insisted on the unarmed foreigners getting down from their vehicle, would have most probably ended fatally. As it is the Mikado has sent his regrets to Sir Harry Parkes; but the British Minister demands the names of the culprits, and the government declares that they are unknown.! Now here is strange thing. The names are quite well. known to the people, and yet are unknown to the government; although all officers so passing along the Tokaido are questioned their names taken, and the time of passing special guard-houses, noted. Sir Harry refused to accept the apology unless accompanied by the names. We shall see what the result will be.

But apart from this, indications are in creasingly prevalent everywhere, since the advent of the Mikado and the daimios with their retainers in Yedo, that an outbreak is imminent. It is difficult accurately to determine whether it will take place in the city itself; but universal opinion holds to this as the most probable locality. At all events, the great provoking cause ispresence of foreigners.

In the city the insults to foreigners are also more numerous than for a long time past. A gentleman was lately riding along, attended by a Japanese guard. A samourar got in his way; and one of the guard rode up to remoustrate, when the fellow took the foot of the guard and tossed him out of his saddle over his pony; and the foreigner had to shew his revolver to save the guard Why no complaint was made to the officials, we are at a loss to understand. The reason given by the gentleman to whom it happened, is, that he frequently visits Yedo on business, and that it would cause him to be a marked man.

ludeed the party opposed to foreigners is far from being even quiescent; far less dead. And it is as sure as anything can be in Japan, that it only awaits a favourable moment to make itself felt; and to bring on a foreign war.

It is not true that an actual rupture has taken place between the English French Ministers on the one side and the Japanese government, on the other; bu as the latter hesitate to give any satisfaction, in the shape of apology or anything else, for the late interferences with for eigners, all the foreign representatives have agreed to suspend further diplomatic relations with the government until full and ample reparation shall have been made,

MISSIONS AND MISSIONARIES.

The recent little affair in China, which was settled in one way by what may be called the gunboat of Christianity, and another by the good sense and justice of Lord Clarendon, suggests some reflections on missions and missionaries generally and their mode of work. What kind of success do they really achieve? why do they fail with one race and not with another I which is in fact their best hunting-ground for converts? and what is the secret of victory or loss in these matters? The success of which Roman Catholic missionaries boast admitting it to be true, has been ascribed to several causes. They are single men acting under very strict discipline, so that naturally their cost of living is small, and a little money goes a long way. Moreover they are too well trained to subordination to venture on such curious and irrational freaks as are occasionally performed by Protestant missionaries. They are ac cused of being more anxious to baptize the foreheads than to convince the understandings of their converts, and of showing undue indulgence to the remnants of heathen faith and ceremonies which linger in the minds and crop out in the customs of many nominal proselytes. No loubt English Protestant missions and missionaries are expensive to the societies which support them owing to their partiality for the company of their wives and their irrepressible tendency to large families; they are also occasionally expensive to the country, as we know to our cost and they are sometimes viewed with distrust by natives, as being supposed, by th operation of an unexplained but inflexible law, to be the harbinger of the traders and soldiers whose coming the unfortunate pagans generally find reason sooner or later to lament. Comparatively few of them are very learned men, if we may judge by the specimens frequently exhibited at Exeter Hall, nor do they receive that rigid scientific training which the Church of Rome commonly insists on. It is perhaps for this reason that of all he dear heathen who are exposed to our zeal for conversion, our woolly-headed prother, the negro, it is who capitulates the most readily. The Maoris have indeed adopted Christianity, but in practice they seem to be more inspired by the spirit of the Old Testament than of the New : and we have converted the Zulus wholesale, but then, en revanche, they have shaken the faith of one of our own bishops. The Chi nese appreciate our efforts inadequately and it is easier to make of the young Brahman a polished and learned sceptic than : Christian. The Turks and incidels for whom we pray so often do not respond, and the Mahometans in general not only dis pise but hate our religion. But of al others, the Jew has in him less of the material that goes to make a conver than, as we believe, any human being gentleman once boasted that, though he had had many and curious dealings with the children of Israel, only one had ever got the better of him. "but then." h added, "he was a converted Jew." Notwith standing the undoubted proneness of the ancient Jew to idolatry, most anthropologists maintain that the Semitic is essentially and naturally a monotheistic race, and therefore. must ever be instinctively disinclined to receive the doctrine of the Trinity. without searching so profoundly into the subject there are, we think, many reasons lying quite on the surface to explain who the Jew is the most difficult of proselytes. He comes of a stubborn and also of a persecuted race. For though, in speaking of disreputable are seldom poor. They take the tracts, and are often willing to converse or argue, but that seems very nearly to exhaust the evidence in favour of the society. Of one it is remarked, "I cannot just say that he belonged to that highly interesting class, the secret believers." As we searched in vain for further mention of the class which comprises these objects of interest, we fear that even " secret believers " are something more than rare. The wife of a Jew who had attentively listened to conversations on Christianity "had evidently grown in knowledge, I wish I could add also in grace, but that was not the case," observes the aggrieved missionary. Accounts of arguments and discussions mostly end thus: "I met this objection by Scripture and then we separated." "We were interrupted, and the discussion ended." One Jew remarked that he was "tired of the tracts, and advised us to sell and circulate old Hebrew books as being more useful and interesting." Another "begged us to leave him, as he never would believe in what we said." One, who to speak plainly was an old clothes man, maintained firmly that if the Messiah had come as the missionaries represented he should not be obliged to stand in the fair selling hats. With regard to the depôt of the society at the last Paris Exhibition, great stress is laid on the fact that none of the tracts given to the Jews were found in the park torn or thrown away. This might be a hopeful sign if it were said of a British workman, but then, as a rule. Jews do not waste even paper. At Mulhouse au old Jew complained not only of the sinfulness of mankind, but of his own sins; he had, however, "an inveterate antipathy to Jesus." Elsewhere we read, "The building was full, Jewish faces seen." Two amiable young Jewesses received tracts; some boy Jews (apparently also amiable) did the same thing; finally, two ladies of title shook hands with the missionaries, and Prince Oscar of Sweden with his chamberlain spent half an hour at the society's depôt in Paris .- Pall Mall

EDUCATIONAL FUNDS IN ENGLAND.

A parliamentary return gives the amount expended, during the ten years between 1859 and 1868, both inclusive, out of the moneys voted by Parliament for national education in England and Wales. It then exhibits in detail under the heads "subscriptions," "school pence," and "other sources" the sums of money raised locally to meet the grants from the Central Education Department in Downing-street. During the ten years to which we have referred the department voted £6,070,135. To meet his amount no less a sum than £8,991,405 was raised locally, £4,554,333 being subscriptions. £3,241,327 being "school pence" and £1,195,754 the contributions from £3,241,327 being "school pence," and £1,195,745 the contributions from "other sources." But in almost every journal in which these figures have been quoted the above-named sum £8,991,505 has been represented as the whole and sole amount locally raised throughout England and Wales for the purpose of national education in ten years. It is difficult to understand how people could fall into such an obvious error, inasmuch as before this very return appeared another parliamentary paper moved for by the Duke of Marlborough and relating to Church of England schools for the poor alone had been issued. This paper shows that in Eugland and Wales: while 4,690 Church of England schools are annually aided by the State, there are as many as 6,571 national or parish schools not so aided, but supported by contributions, school pence, and occasionally by endowments, but all, of course, raised locally, and not met by one farthing of State money. Such are the relative proportions of State aided and unaided schools for the Church of England alone. But we have to take into account all the money raised locally and independently of the State grants by Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, the Congregational body, the Baptists, and various other religious denominations, to say nothing of the moneys raised from British and "ragged" schools and schools peculiarly philanthropic in character, such as the schools at Pinner belong. ing to the Commercial Travellers. Instead of representing £8,901,405 as the whole sum rused in ten years for education independently of the State, it would be much nearer the mark and much more just to charitable persons to represent it as three

The masonic body have found an opportunity for a second demonstration in Dublin in connection with the annual distribution he asked Miss Rose to wait a little longer, Custom House is closed. I have heard no the brig Mary Lowell, without delay, and by some depressing little papers which were of prizes to the pupils of their male and female schools, which took place in the Exhibition Palace, and was a kind of sequel to the late ball at which Prince Arthur was present. The missons of all orders word their costume, and walked in procession round the building, which was brilliantly lighted, the Duke of Leinster, as Grand Master, at their head. Addresses were delivered in defence of masonry and on bepute; but he was perfectly certain that she Oopacks are now from Tls. 71 to Tls. 101 of Cuba for the immediate release of the cency and verbiage with which that little is half of the charities. Lord Dunboyne,

THE "TREATY PORTS OF CHINA & JAPAN," AND "NOTES AND or by deputy, be present and take part in QUERIES ON CHINA AND JAPAN."

> (From the "Straits Times," July 27, 1868. Some time ago we had occasion to remark upon the progress that Literature as represented by the Press had made and was making in the East, and our attention has again been called to the subject by the receipt of a Hongkong publication which deserves some notice and which we have much pleasure in introducing to the knowledge of our readers. We allude to Notes nonthly by Mr Saint, the proprietor of the China Mail newspaper. This publication is well printed on good paper, and in size and shape is very like its well-known namesake or prototype at home, and is equally a mine containing very curious and useful information regarding the language, literature, history, manners and customs of the Chinese and in a less degree of the Japanese. It says a good deal for the extent and stability of the footing of Europeans in China, that such a publication as this should be established and conducted with apparently successful vigour. The publication is altogether a very in teresting one, and wishing it every success, we commend it to the attention and support of our readers.

(From the "Friend of India," June 4, 1868.) We acknowledge with thanks the receipt of the numbers for the current year of "Notes and Queries," a most deserving Angle-Chinese monthly, edited by Mr N. B. Dennys, whose "Treaty Ports of China and Japan" are so well known. From the names attached to the "Notes" we can see that the contributors include some of the best Chinese scholars in the East. Its interest is not confined to China, and it will be of valuable assistance to all scholars, who have directed their attention towards the suspend or dismiss, subject to an appeal to subject of Buddhism and its literature, and the Consul concerned; when the Pilot is a generally to all who are interested in ori-

This really useful volume ["Treaty Ports China and Japan"] is intended as a guide for travellers and residents in China and Japan, and as a book of reference for mercantile men generally. It contains an account, historical and political, of all the open ports of these countries, together with Peking, Yedo, Hongkong, and Macao. ias been carefully compiled and edited by Mr N. B. Dennys; and the claborate maps and plans, with which the work abounds, considerably enhance its value. * * *

We have thus given in outline some of the more prominent portions of the chapter devoted to Canton, as a specimen of the whole volume. Other chapters treating of Hundred Taels by the authorities to whose Macao, Formosa, Ningpo, Shanghae, and the remainder of the treaty ports, we can only enumerate. The pages describing Peking, the capital, are so interesting, and contain so much that is new to European readers respecting its history, public buildings, and general characteristics, that we where each boat will be given a certificate would fain transfer them to our columns, and number. The words "Licensed Pilot A complete and intelligible plan of the Imperial City and neighbourhood, gives us an accurate notion of the relative position of its divisions, streets, and places.
